CLAIMING HERITAGE

BarCamp – 5th of October 2019 10:00-18:00

Our cultural heritage is multi-faceted, diverse and individual. A rich selection of places is protected in order to preserve them and give them a future. But this selection often does not represent the values and interests of all. The terms monument and heritage relate to various aspects of our built environment, but capture unconventional places and concepts often inadequately, just as experts have only a limited insight into value creation processes and social conceptions of the relevance of places and buildings. Techno clubs and ballrooms, skateparks and parklands, virtual and real reconstructions - who determines what is relevant for whom and how it should be handled?

Get involved and discuss with interested people and experts about the recognition, significance and handling of places and buildings that are important to you. Turn your questions and suggestions into a topic for discussion rounds and workshops of the BarCamp Claiming Heritage!

Registration until 30th of September 2019:
